AHI celebrated the 190th anniversary of Greek Independence Day by hosting its annual "Congressional Salute to Greek Independence Day" on April 6, 2011. The common democratic ideals held by Greece and the United States were reaffirmed by several members of Congress at the event which was held in cooperation with the co-chairs of the Congressional Caucus on Hellenic Issues, U.S. Reps. Gus Bilirakis (R-FL) and Carolyn Maloney (D-NY).

Members of Congress who addressed the audience included (in order of appearance): U.S. Reps. Albio Sires (D-NJ), Carolyn Maloney (D-NY), Brad Sherman (D-CA), Thaddeus McCotter (R-MI), Gus Bilirakis (R-FL), Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-FL), chairman, House Foreign Affairs Committee; Frank Pallone (D-NJ), and Michael Grimm (R-NY). The members' statements can be found at www.aheworld.org.

Special guest speakers were Ambassador of Greece to the U.S. Vassilis Kaskarelis and Ambassador of the Republic of Cyprus to the U.S. Pavlos Anastasiades. Representatives from the Armenian National Committee of America (ANCA) joined AHI and the Greek American community in the celebration.

Each of the speakers emphasized their admiration for Hellenic culture and for the valiant and inspirational struggle for Greek Independence achieved in 1821. They also expressed their support for a proper settlement of the Cyprus issue, a proper resolution to the FYROM name-recognition issue, and religious freedom for the Ecumenical Patriarchate. Also during the evening, there was a presentation of traditional Greek dances performed by the Return to Origins Greek Folk Dance Troupe under the direction of Rena Papapostolou. The Greek School of Saint George Greek Orthodox Church, Bethesda, Md., sang the national anthems of the U.S. and Greece.

AHI SUBMITS FY12 FOREIGN AID TESTIMONY TO HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS PANEL

AHI submitted testimony to the House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittee on State, Foreign Operations, and Related Agencies on the Obama Administration's foreign aid proposals for FY2012 on Thursday, April 14, 2011.

In the best interests of the United States, AHI's testimony opposed: 1) any military assistance the administration will request for Turkey until Turkey removes its troops and illegal Turkish settlers in Cyprus; 2) aid the administration will request for the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM); and 3) any reduction that might be introduced in the aid levels for the UN Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus.

In addition, the testimony strongly opposed the $7.5 million reduction of Economic Support Fund (ESF) funding for Cyprus. The FY2012 proposed level of funding is $3.5 million. However, AHI testified that it supports continued ESF funding for Cyprus as long as it is tied exclusively to bi-communal projects of the island as mandated by U.S. law. The law states U.S. funds are to support only "measures aimed at reunification."

This House Appropriations Subcommittee is chaired by U.S. Rep. Kay Granger (R-TX). U.S. Rep. Nita Lowey (D-NY) is the ranking member. Visit www.aheworld.org to read AHI's testimony.

The other three participants were: AHIF President Dr. Spireas, U.S. Rep. John Sarbanes (D-MD), and Aris Melissaratos, former secretary of Business & Economic Development for the State of Maryland. The mentor fair also provided a forum for specialized workshops and a networking session. Moreover, at the awards gala, President Larigakis accepted an award on behalf of U.S. Gus M. Bilirakis (R-FL), who is the co-chair of the Congressional Caucus on Hellenic Issues. In acceptance, Larigakis commended Congressman Bilirakis for his long-standing support of Greek American issues, including his recent introduction of H.Res.180 that urges Turkey to lift religious restrictions on the Ecumenical Patriarchate. Finally, President Larigakis addressed a breakfast forum on the needs and challenges of the Greek American community on April 3, 2011. The Hermes International Expo is organized by longtime AHI member Paul Kotrosios.

Nick Larigakis speaking at Halki panel.

AHI participated at a panel discussion “The Theological School of Halki: Past, Present, and Future” held by the Annunciation Greek Orthodox Cathedral of New England Cultural Events Committee on March 31, 2011.

AHI President Nick Larigakis was a panelist speaking on the topic “Halki—U.S. Position and Responsibility.” He was joined on the panel by Historian and Philanthropist Christos Papoutsy, George Rockas, Esq., who served as chair of the International Religious Freedom Conference, Brussels; former Rhode Island State Senator Lou Raptakis, and Professor Michalis Psalidopoulos, C. Karamanlis Chair in Hellenic & Southeastern European Studies, Tufts University. Greek Consul General of Boston Elias Fotopoulos offered remarks. Mrs. Mary Papoutsy served as moderator and His Eminence Metropolitan Methodios oversaw the panel discussion.

Larigakis discussed the importance of the community’s work to make policymakers aware of the restrictions on religious freedom placed upon the Ecumenical Patriarchate, which includes the closure of Halki. He brought to the attention of the audience the significance of the International Religious Freedom Act (IRFA) of 1998 as it relates to Turkey and the fact that the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF), which was created by IFRA, has placed Turkey on its “Watch List” for two consecutive years, 2009 and 2010. Moreover, Larigakis created awareness about legislation, H.Res.180, that urges Turkey lift its restrictions on religious freedom of the Ecumenical Patriarchate and the important role local communities have to bring it to legislators’ attention. “In addition, when the Theological School of Halki is re-opened, it is important that it is administered by the Ecumenical Patriarchate and not administered by the Turkish government,” he added.

Chris Smith (R-NJ), who is a longstanding member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs and co-chairman of the U.S. Helsinki Commission.

AHI IN THE NEWS

AHI President Nick Larigakis provided an in-depth interview to Greek News Journalist Vicki James Yiannias that was featured as a double-page spread in the publication's April 4, 2011 edition. Yiannias conducted the interview soon after AHI's New York City screening of the documentary “Cyprus Still Divided: A U.S. Foreign Policy Failure” at New York University. In the interview, Larigakis discusses the importance of the documentary and what the community can do to create awareness about it. He also provided his thoughts on recent developments in the eastern Mediterranean.

Letters to the Editor

President Larigakis submitted a letter to the editor to The Washington Post on March 24, 2011 rebutting a statement made by Turkey's Ambassador to the U.S. Namik Tan. In a March 15, 2011 letter to the editor to The Post, Ambassador Tan stated “Freedom of expression and media are safeguarded by Turkish legislation” as part of his defense of the country's record to protect journalists. Larigakis contended that the U.S. Department of State and European Union would differ, citing statements released by both entities that expressed "...concern about recent police actions against journalists in Turkey." He also challenged Ambassador Tan's statement that "The rule of law is a fundamental tenet of Turkish democracy," citing Turkey's blatant violation of the rule of law in Cyprus, the suppression of religious freedom in Turkey, and frequent violations of Greece's sovereignty in the Aegean.

STATEMENTS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

AHI Publishes 2011 Policy Statements on Greek American Issues

In March, AHI released its 2011 Policy Statements, which discuss issues affecting the Greek American community as they pertain to United States relations with Greece, Cyprus, and Turkey.

The policy statements were approved by a record number of membership-based organizations including: American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association (AHEPA), American Hellenic Council of California, Armenian National Committee of America (ANCA), Cyprus Federation of America, Evrytarian Association of America “Velouchi,” Hellenic American National Council (HANC), International Coordination Committee-Justice for Cyprus (PSEKA), Pancretan Association of America, Pan-Pontian Federation of U.S.A and Canada, Panepirotic Federation of America, and United Chios Societies of America and Canada.

The policy statements serve as a guide when communicating positions to U.S. policy makers and the media. The positions are based on the best interests of the United States. AHI strongly urges everyone to utilize these statements to their full potential. Visit www.aheworld.org to download a copy.

Foreign Affairs Chair’s Support for Hellenic, Religious Freedom Welcomed

AHI welcomed House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen’s (R-FL) reiterated support for the reunification of Cyprus, the rights of the Ecumenical Patriarchate, and Greece’s “good faith efforts” to resolve the name dispute with the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) following a meeting she had with Chairman of the Hellenic Parliament’s Committee on Foreign Affairs and Defense Konstantinos Vrettos on March 15, 2011. Chairman Ros-Lehtinen stated she was pleased to meet with Chairman Vrettos and the two expressed a “shared hope” for a permanent and lasting solution to the Cyprus issue. She also expressed “unwavering support” for the Ecumenical Patriarchate and was pleased to see relations between Greece and Israel improve. A link to her full statement can be found at www.aheworld.org.

AHI Rebuts NGO’s Briefing Paper on Cyprus Settlement

In March, AHI issued a statement to rebut a briefing paper published by the International Crisis Group (ICG) on February 22, 2011. The ICG briefing paper “Cyprus: Six Steps toward a Settlement” disregarded the rule of law and recommended more concessions from the Republic of Cyprus, which is the victim of Turkish aggression. In addition, AHI’s rebuttal statement, authored by AHI Foundation Chair of Fellows Dr. Van Coufoudakis, points out that ICG’s acceptance of funding from the Turkish Ministry of Foreign Affairs discredits ICG’s proposed steps toward a Cyprus settlement, which obviously favors Turkey’s position.

Senator’s Statement on Human Rights Violation in Occupied Cyprus Lauded

AHI applauded a statement by Sen. Benjamin Cardin (D-MD) that called the disruption of Christmas liturgy at Agios Synesios by security services in the Turkish-occupied Cypriot town of Rizokarpaso “appalling” and the act “should be roundly condemned by people of good will.” He also called for the removal of restrictions on religious freedom in occupied Cyprus. Moreover, Senator Cardin expressed concern about the State Department’s tendency to “downplay” the difficulties faced by Orthodox Christians to hold services in occupied Cyprus. He co-chairs the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe (U.S. Helsinki Commission) and is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The senator entered the statement into the Congressional Record on January 25, 2011.

AHI GENERAL NEWS

The American College of Greece received the Hellenic Heritage National Public Service Award for its pioneering role in cultivating a fertile intellectual and cultural collaboration between Greece and the United States through education.

In acceptance of the award, American College of Greece President David Horner stated, “As an American and a Greek institution we feel a special bond and obligation to the Greek-American community. We understand the aspiration of this community to preserve its unique inheritance. And we are determined to deploy our unique resources, as the oldest and largest American college or university in Europe to support this goal. So we thank AHI for this singular recognition that affirms not only the mission and the history but also the promise of the American College of Greece.”

Larry Michael received the Hellenic Heritage Achievement Award for his unparalleled achievements and excellence in the field of sports journalism.

“Thank you for bestowing this honor on me,” said Michael. “I am humbled by it.”

Michael credited his parents for instilling in him a “Greek work ethic” for any success he has achieved and lauded the work of AHI has done over the years for important causes. He cited three attributes one must have to succeed: talent, work ethic, and passion.

He remarked, “But I was trying to think about what was the common denominator that maybe we all here tonight have. The Greek-Americans, or you know some of our visitors here as well, I think everybody that is here is respecting what AHI has done over the years and it is such and important, important cause... What is the common denominator that we have here?...I think we all share that those three things: talent, work ethic, and passion.”

Congresswoman Shelley Berkley (D-NV) received the Hellenic Heritage National Public Service Award for her commitment to public service and her support in strengthening United States relations with Greece and Cyprus, which she reaffirmed strongly in her acceptance speech.

“I may not be the smartest person in the world, but I know when I see an illegal occupation, and there’s an illegal occupation going on in the nation of Cyprus and it needs to end now. I don’t know much about naming countries, but the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia should not have the name Macedonia, it belongs to someone else. And shame on the Turks for treating with such disrespect the Ecumenical Patriarch, it is time that they recognize the Ecumenical Patriarch and gave back the land that they stole,” she remarked.

Congresswoman Berkley also commented on the emerging relationship between Israel and Greece and Cyprus, “I am very happy that there’s been a thawing of relations between Greece and the state of Israel. I am hoping that it will continue, because they are two democracies in a very, very dangerous part of the world. The Cypriots, the Greeks, and the Jews have a long history and it’s time that we put our differences behind us and work together for the goals and the values that we all share.”

She concluded by expressing her appreciation for being made to feel as if she is part of a family, “I may not have any Greek blood in my veins, but I have a Greek head, and a Greek heart and I cannot tell you how honored I am each and every day to know that I have been so accepted by the community, and that you consider me one of your own.”

Actor Michael Constantine received the Hellenic Heritage Achievement Award for his unparalleled achievements and excellence in the performing arts, which was presented by 2010 Hellenic Heritage Achievement Award honoree John Aniston.

Constantine wove comedic tales and anecdotes from his childhood days ranging from his Greek school adventures and poem recitals to his service as an alter boy to his enjoyment of Greek culture—the food, music, dancing and when Greek families came together for fun. He recounted that growing up he did not have grandparents, uncles and aunts, and cousins because his relatives were in Greece and the cost to visit them was just too much. Constantine added that acting provided him with his first opportunity to visit Greece where they shot a movie titled “Island of Love.”

“So now finally, anyhow, I’m in a whole room full of Greeks, and I am delighted to be here,” he concluded. “I thank you all for this wonderful, wonderful honor. I guarantee you that I will treasure it.”

Dr. Takey Crist, obstetrician and gynecologist, received the Hellenic Heritage National Public Service Award for his dedicated community activism in reunifying Cyprus and preserving its culture, and for his advocacy for women’s health.

“I would like to take the opportunity to thank the American Hellenic Institute. We must never forget the dedication of Eugene Rossides and what he started 37 years ago,” Dr. Crist said. “I am here tonight because of my Cypriot parents, who instilled in me the ideals of our heritage.”

Dr. Crist credited his teachers that he had growing up in North Carolina, and he acknowledged the unwavering support of his friends who believed in him and understood his passion for causes. He also recounted his heartbreaking experiences as an obstetrician and gynecologist, serving the wives of Marines who are stationed at Camp Lejeune and bearing witness to devastating condition our wounded servicemen return from battle, which he described as “maimed” and “mentally destroyed.”

Dr. Crist remarked, “You’re in Afghanistan to be a killer and in 37 hours you’re back here trying to adjust to civilization...I’m just trying to explain to you something is happening in our society. I love my government, I fight for my government. There’s not enough resources to take care of these boys...So we have a community problem.”

The honorees’ many accomplishments were celebrated throughout the evening, and highlighted in congratulatory letters submitted to AHI by His Eminence Archbishop Demetrios, Ambassador of Greece to the United States Vassilis Kaskarelis, Ambassador of the Republic of Cyprus to the United States Pavlos Anastasiades, World Council of Hellenes Abroad USA Region President Ted G. Spyropoulos, and International Coordinating Committee Justice for Cyprus President Philip Christopher.

Special guests attending the event included: Ambassador Kaskarelis, Chairman of the Hellenic Parliament’s National Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee Konstantinos Vrettos, Ambassador Anastasiades, U.S. Rep. Bob Filner (D-CA), former U.S. Ambassador to Greece Tom Miller and Bonnie Miller; and former U.S. Ambassador to Belgium Tom Korologos.

“The AHI Board of Directors wishes to thank Aleco Haralambides for his dedicated service and commitment to the organization as its president during the past two years,” added Rossides.

As COO, Larigakis continues much of his duties as executive director, a position he has held since 1992. In this capacity, Larigakis has been responsible for managing the day-to-day operations of AHI and its affiliated organizations. He has directed all aspects of strategic planning, policy analysis, public affairs programming, government relations, financial development, and media communications. Larigakis’ responsibilities as executive director also included working with the U.S. Congress on U.S.-Greece-Cyprus relations, where he has provided witness testimony to several congressional committees; and as liaison to the grass roots community, traveling throughout the U.S. to educate the public about AHI’s public policy issues and other aspects of its mission. As a result, he has been interviewed by mainstream, Greek-American, and Greek media outlets on issues affecting U.S. policy in the eastern Mediterranean.

“I am grateful for this exciting opportunity to lead AHI in this new capacity,” said Larigakis. “I look forward to working together as a team to grow our organization through our member programs and informative policy forums as we continue to work to strengthen relations between the United States and Greece and Cyprus.”

“The AHI Foundation Board of Directors is deeply grateful to AHI Founder Gene Rossides for his leadership of the Foundation,” stated Larigakis. “Under his direction, the Foundation launched a series of policy conferences, a study-abroad program, started a book publishing program, held a historic conference on Cyprus’s fiftieth anniversary, started the AHIF Online Policy Journal, and initiated the endowment fund.”

AHI Founder Gene Rossides said, “I enjoyed the opportunity to lead the AHI Foundation during a time of growth in new programs. I have tremendous confidence in the abilities of Dr. Spireas to lead the foundation in the years to come, and I wish him the best.”

He is the inventor and author of more than 80 international and domestic patents and 200 scientific papers, books, and other publications in the fields of industrial pharmacy, pharmaceutical technology, biopharmaceutics, pharmacokinetics and analytical chemistry.

Dr. Spireas holds a Master’s and a Doctorate Degree in Pharmaceutics and Industrial Pharmacy from St. John’s University, Jamaica, N.Y., and a B.S. Degree in Pharmacy from the Hellenic National University of Athens, Greece. In addition, Dr. Spireas is very active in the Greek Orthodox Church. ADVANCING HELLENISM'S CULTURAL LEGACY THROUGH ART

By Chrysoula Economopoulos

Euripides "Rip" Kastaris.

Euripides "Rip" Kastaris' has blazed a trail as an internationally recognized artist for over 25 years. He draws from his Hellenic and Orthodox Christian heritage as a major source of inspiration for his works of contemporary art.

Kastaris was born in Greece, and he is the son of a Greek Orthodox priest. His father's mission brought his family to the United States at an early age, settling in St. Louis where he resided for most of his life. Kastaris began his career as designer and commercial illustrator. Asked what inspired him to branch out and dedicate himself full-time as an artist, he credits his need to seek a sense of purpose and passion in his vocation.

"One of the greatest factors in longevity is a sense of purpose," says Kastaris. "It gives us focus when we have passion and it does fire the flames so you can really bulldoze and steam through."

Kastaris was first invited to display his work in Greece alongside the work of other Greek artists. This first set of fine art was called "Doric Temples," and the paintings sold very well. So Kastaris began juggling two careers—one in the office, the other in the studio. In addition to his passion, the overwhelming reception his artwork received provided the impetus to dedicate himself fully to art.

"I got a lot of encouragement about doing things that were rooted in my own culture and history, and at that point, I was already working 90 hours a week doing commercial art. So I had to make a decision to really cool my jets and get in the back of the line of something I had never done, which was show my work at galleries and go to trade shows," Kastaris recalls.

Never looking back, he underscores, "I feel strongly about this. You only have one life, and if you feel called to go into some area, most people give up on themselves way too quickly."

Talking about his artistic inspiration, Kastaris points to an ability to quiet his judgments about what he is going to paint and "allow the real spirit of what's going on to crystallize and come through me...I want not to limit myself to what was done in the past."

While much of Kastaris' work is Greek-inspired, he does not seek to replicate past glories of the heritage, but rather continue to evolve and supplement the body of cultural work with his own new interpretations and inspirations.

Kastaris' principle is to "...try to be as universal as possible because what's great about all Greek history and mythology is that the ancients did not teach their children about how to be great Greeks. They taught them how to be authentic human beings."

Kastaris' other new-found passion is to plant the seed for creating a Byzantine iconography chair:

"There's no place, not only in the United States, there's no place in the entire western hemisphere where you can go to a four-year degree college, art school, or university and become a Byzantine iconographer," Kastaris points out. The challenge? "We have the money and resources, except that we're asleep to it. We don't know the treasure that we have and that it's all dying out."

Kastaris is perhaps best known for two important works of art. First, the landmark "Kyklos—Circle of Glory" mural that was commissioned by the Hellenic Cultural Foundation and which permanently adorns the inside of the Athens Olympic Stadium's VIP Salon. The mural, presented to the City of Athens and the people of Greece, honors the return of the Olympic Games to Athens in 2004.

In cooperation with long-time colleague Michael Eckhard, Kastaris recently completed a monumental mural painted on the side of a building in Alton, Ill., a historic river town just north of St. Louis. It depicts the "Alton Steamboat Landing," and stands as a colorful landmark that aims to revitalize the local community. Approximately 1 million drivers are expected to pass by the mural annually.

Add to this commissions for official artwork produced for the Salt Lake City 2002, Athens 2004, Torino 2006 and Beijing 2008 Olympiads, the restoration of St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Church in St. Louis, and his more recent commissions for Byzantine icons for Orthodox sanctuaries and private collections, it quickly becomes apparent that Kastaris is a creative tour de force.

THE FASHION WORLD'S KARMA QUEEN

By Chrysoula Economopoulos

Elle Sakellis.

September 11th was a pivotal event in American history with an especially traumatic impact on those who experienced that fateful day first-hand. For Elle Sakellis, a native Brooklynite who narrowly escaped the collapse of New York's Twin Towers, it was a life-changing day. But every dark event has the potential to incite change for the better should a person choose to turn crisis into opportunity. Sakellis is one of these people.

She started her career in finance, working at various prominent investment banks over the course of several years. "It was good work, it was challenging work, however I didn't love what I was doing," she recalls. "I was really good at what I was doing, but I just knew in my heart that this wasn't what I wanted to do but yet I didn't really know what the next step was going to be."

Then September 11th happened after which Sakellis entered a period of self-reflection. Leaving the financial world, she spent a few months in her summer home in Mykonos making jewelry for family and friends as a cathartic exercise. She returned to the U.S. and decided to enter the fashion industry, working for Mark Ecko, French Connection, and even doing wealth management for rap artist 50 Cent.

Sakellis's big break came with Victoria's Secret. Her jewelry making drew this major brand's attention, resulting in the order of thousands of units. It was a tall order, yet Sakellis's resourcefulness helped her meet the order which ultimately opened the door for future success.

With the Victoria's Secret name behind her, Sakellis could contact other catalogues to begin marketing her private label products. "When it got to the point that my orders and my client base were growing exponentially month over month, it was very evident that it was time to leave French Connection and start my own business," she says.

Otrera came to life in 2004 producing private label jewelry. Sakellis's Greek heritage played a prominent role in this entrepreneurial venture on several levels. First, her company is eponymous with the Greek warrior goddess and immortal mother of the Amazons, known for her astounding beauty and prowess.

Although Otrera began with jewelry, the company made its name through its signature evil eye scarf. Sakellis recounts a summer day in Mykonos when she walked into a shop with her grandmother and saw a wall of evil eye talismans assembled on a wall. "I don't know why, but I just stopped and looked and thought, wow, this is really beautiful. It would look really cool in a print," she says of the inspiration for her blockbuster accessory.

Back in New York, Sakellis worked with a graphic artist to bring the concept to life on paper. Once the scarf was produced, a friend ran it in Elle Magazine. The scarf exploded in popularity worldwide. Most notably it graced the storefront of luxury department store Barneys New York.

Otrera's next big hit was the Hamsa scarf, a good luck charm popular in the Middle East and North Africa. Thus Otrera developed its brand as a good luck company, earning Sakellis the nickname "the Karma Queen."

As time went on, she also started receiving calls from designers who did not know how to actually produce their own collections—ranging from shoes to handbags to baby stroller covers. Now these designers are her clients and Sakellis sources their collections from different countries.

What's next for Sakellis? She explains the evil eye will always be in her collection in some way. The fall season will welcome the Evil Eye Pointillism Scarf in a new fabrication. She also notes that Otrera's next launch will be a beach line including swimwear. "Prints would be amazing in skirts and pants for the beach," she says.

Following a philosophy of emanating positive energy into the universe, listening to your gut instinct and following your passion, this fashion goddess is a living example that good karma begets more good karma in spades.
